HEROES LIVE AGAIN IN THE MEMORY OF AMERICAN PEOPLE

President Wilson in the amphitheate Committees from the Grand Army Woman's Relief Corps, Daughters o Veterans, Ladies of the G. A. R., Legion of Loyal Women, Sons of Veterans Spanish-American War Veterans, Army and Navy Union and Lineal Society o and Navy Union and Lineal Society of the Spanish War had decorated the graves in the forencon at the cemetery. Upon the arrival of the procession at the cemetery, it formed in front of Arlington Mansion, where the American flag, which had hung at half staff since sunrise, was floated to full staff to the salute of a battery from Fort Myer. Headed by the United States Marine Band, the procession proceeded to the tomb of the unknown, where flowers were placed, while the band played a dirge.

larger problems of society and government ment.

"It is a proper function of government to encourage its citizens in the solution of their own problems by giving every man without regard to race or color a fair chance and by encouraging our people to sobriety, industry and economy. Our own people must be kept busy, our workingmen must be employed at good wages, our industries must prosper, legitimate enterprise should be encouraged. And this prosperity must depend upon forces within our country and not those without."

Thoughts of Lincoln Foremost. In the introduction of his speech Gov. Willis said:

"Just over yonder, across the placid Potomac, stands that world-famed shaft to the memory of our nation's first chief executive, George Washingfirst chief executive, George Washington, beloved son of Virginia, the Old Dominion state, birthplace of our present President, and ere long, not far from this monument will rise the glorious, mute tributs in stone to him who is foremost in our minds and hearts today, Abraham Lincoln, rugged son of Kentucky, who yesterday, today and so long as the universe exists, will, indeed, belong to the ages." so long as the universe exists, will, indeed, 'belong to the ages.'

of deceased comrades.

Two members of this battalion, John Ricks and Martin Ohl, were the first of the organization to lose their lives. They were members of Company D. Turner Rifles, and are buried at Prospect Hill. They were members of a group of skirmishers near Great Falls protecting the water supply of the city, when they came up with a body of Confederates and lost their lives in the skirmish which followed.

John J. B. Lerch, one of the survivors of today, recalled at Prospect Hill this engagement and how the Richmond papers reported several days thereafter that seven of the Confederates were killed in the engagement and several wounded.

"Each of us are Germans," he said today, "but you may see that all of us are carrying and honoring the Stars and Stripes of our glorious adopted country."

Veterans in Blue Attend at Soldiers' Home Cemetery

Under the direction of Arthur Hendicks, past department commander, G. A. R., a parade of veterans and others rmed at Stanley Hall at the Soldiers' Home at 9:30 o'clock this morning and marched to the speakers' stand of the home, members of Henry Wilson Post, No. 17, G. A. R.; Lafayette Corps, No. 10, Woman's Relief Corps; Col. John Jacob Astor Camp, No. 6, U. S. W. V.; veterans of the home in blue uniforms and invited guests comprised the parade.

The exercises opened with the sounding of "assembly" by a bugler. "America" was sung by the choir and audience, with the band accompanying. Rev. H. Allen Griffith, chaplain of the home, said the invocation. The choir sang "The Boys Who Wear the Blue," after which Gen. Logan's order for observance of Memorial day was read by Arthur Hendricks, past department commander, G. A. R. "Prayer to the Virgin" was played by the band.

Peace Poem Je Poed

Peace Poem Is Read. An original poem, "War and Peace, read by Dr. Thomas Calver, was as fol-

How grateful to the soldier's soul
The rest in peace when war is done;
When shot-rent clouds no longer roll,
The battle fought, the victory won!
Throughout the lurid nights and days
The future time when strife shall cease
Seems golden to his mental gare—
The bravest soldier best loves peace.

All through the marches of the day;
The lonely watches of the night;
The tumult of the maddened fray;
The dash and glory of the fight;
The rest beneath the starlight dome;
The comrade's hall of merry cheer;
His heart is singing soogs of home
And days of peace with loved ones near.

Should vandal foe our land asset!

And threaten with his savage blight. The soldier cagedly will hall

And welcome the protecting fight:
And when our glorious banner waves

And trumpets sound the swift advance that our dear homes he not for slaves,

Will gladly brave the battle's chance.

No warfare can the spirit slay; The only conqueror is peace.
The hated hand that rules today.
Tomorrow finds its power will cease.
The impulse of the manly bregat,
The sense of justice, truth and right,
Can never let the weapon rest.
When dastard knaves are there to fight.

The soldier knows the art of war is but to save the arts of peace; And these are well worth flathing for Until all vandal raids shall cease. The home and firedde's sacred charm. The women and the children dear Are worth the strength of stoutest arm. Are worth the fires that slay and sear.

But peace is sweat to soldiers brave,
Lifte oasis in desert plain;
No greater blessing would they crave
Than fair earth free from war's dark stain,
and when their marches all are past
And hands are still, on quiet breast
Their souls rejoice that then, at last,
Eternal shall be peace and rest.

a better way in which to realize the ends sought in war.
"The patriotism of war is unquesends sought in war.

"The patriotism of war is unquestioned in its sincerity. No one can doubt the genuineness of that loyalty which will voluntarily face the cannons' glare and the bayonets bristling front for the interests of posterity. We do honor today to this deep devotion that will lay down its life for its friend. This type of patriotism has been in large measure the purchase price of both defense and of progress in the past. It was this love of country that caused these men to march forth and offer themselves, as a final tion of the cost of the heritage which they enjoy.

"We honor the true patriotism of war as exemplified here by these brave dead; but there lifts before us also an estimate of the patriotism of peace. This is the measure of the best type of citizenship. He who possesses himself under stress is greater than he who takes a city. The calm poise that knows all the facts and yet hopefully puts a staying hand upon the hasty sword is just as heroic as the patriotism that would rush into battle. This in the past. It was this love of country that caused these men to march forth and offer themselves, as a final offering within their power, upon the altar of freedom and a united nation. It is well that we pause beside the graves of our fathers so that the youth of our land may gain a new conception of the cost of the heritage which they enjoy.

sword is just as heroic as the patriotism that would rush into battle. This is the type of the citizenship of the new day. Brotherhood is the great reality for nations. We owe it to the bleeding lands across the sea and to our southwest to keep strong in peace so that we may be ready to reach out a helping hand in the trying years of reconstruction. The finest patriotism is that which would spare the country the misery incident to war and help it by the strength of peace. We stand ready if patriotism calls to sacrifice; we pray that we may remain free to serve."

The Safest Investments

Are those that do not fluctuate during dis-turbed conditions of the money or stock market. First deed of trust notes (first mortgages), well secured on real estate in the District of Columbia, constitute "gift dage" investments. They do not depend upon the financial responsibility of indi-viduals or corporations for their stability and are exempt from taxation as personal property. We can supply such invest-ments in amounts from $500 upward. Send for booklet, "Concerning Loans and In-vestments."

On this day, so sweetly solemn. Come we now with reverent tread,

'Neath their spirit benediction Bend the knee and bow the head On this day-proud of the boner Of these brave and loyal martyrs Steeping on this field of fame— We are come, the nation's vestals, Tending patriotism's fame.

On this day a fuller meaning

And with reverent hands and trade

Surges o'er us like a flood; We behold our sundered nation Reunited by the blood Of these loyal Union soldiers, Who for right and justice stood.

On this day a clearer vision Comes to us of freedom's light,

On this day we hear their votces, Calling from their hallowed dust

While the sword and cannon rust.

On this day we feel their present

Former Judge De Lacy Recites Lessons Drawn From War

William H. De Lacy, former judge of the Juvenile Court, delivered the oration at the exercises this afternoon a Mount Olivet cemetery. "Our presence here this Memorial day is at once an act of faith, an act of patriotism, an act of devotion to our country, an da sweet remembrance of act of faith, for vain would be our presence here if the dust that hallows this place—this city of the dead—is not the dust of the casements and the bodies that were in life informed by immortal spirits, citizens with our-selves of God's Universe. An act of immortal spirits, citizens with ourselves of God's Universe. An act of patriotism, for these our dead were our country's defenders, men who preserved for us our country by their sufferings, their labors and their death.

"Herein is the silent but eloquent refutation and rebuke to all who say aught in derogation of our Catholics
as good citizens of the United States.
Those who lie buried here were and are members of the universal Catholic Church that knows no nationality, that knows no bounds save the boundaries of humanity itself, whether that humanity be found here in the flesh militant, suffering in the world to come, or triumphant in heaven. But in life
the whole earthly hope and the whole fortune of these same men, from the cradle to the grave, were indissolubly linked with the welfare of the United States of America—had no existence apart from our country for which they suffered, for which they wrought and worked and for which they shed their blood to preserve."

Story of the Grand Review.

Thee."

After remarks appropriate to the occasion by Junior Vice Department Commander Stanton Weaver and the singing of "To Thee, O Country" by the choir, Gen. John A. Logan's order establishing Memorial day was read by Vice Commander Weaver. Soprano solos were sung by Mrs. Arthur G. Dunn and Miss Nellie Southard. Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by Gurnon R. Scott of Cushing Camp, No. 30. Sons of Veterans, and Mrs. Gilbert A. Clark and the choir sang "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground."

The exercises were in charge of a committee from Frederick Douglass Post, No. 21, G. A. R., composed of James W. Butcher, Benjamin F. Davis, Alexander Oglesby, assisted by O. P. American valor.

The oration of the day was delivered by Rev. Francis M. McCoy of Waugh Methodist Episcopal Church, who said in part:

"As we strew with flowers the graves of our beloved dead we are hushed into a calm consideration of the awful cost incident to war and feel that the new and great problem-of our day is to find a better way in which to realize the ends sought in war.

"The patriotism of war is unquestioned to the awful cost incident to war and feel that the new and great problem of our day is to find a better way in which to realize the ends sought in war.

"The patriotism of war is unquestioned to the day of the patriotism of war is unquestioned to the day of the republic that marched past the daily but no less patriotic avocations of American citizenship. The men of the south were left to their heroic acceptance of the arbitrament of war, and to gradual return to devotion to our common countries."

"The patriotism of war is unquestioned to the day of the arbitrament of war, and to gradual return to devotion to our common countries."

"Great as were the happenings and the campaigns of the civil war, there was nothing in that most momentous struggle so sublime as its close. The grand review of 1865 saw no vanquished foes trailed in the wake of the Grand Army of the Republic that marched past the daily but no less patriotic avocations of American citizenship. The men of the south were left to their heroic acceptance of the arbitrament of war, and to gradual return to devotion to our common countries."

pronounced the invocation, and Memorial day orders were read by V. L. Garrigus, past commander of Lincoln Camp. A vocal solo, "Pie Jesu," was sung by Ambrose Durkin. The chorus and assembly sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," after which B. J. Northcott, past commander of the Maryland division, Sons of Veterans, read Lincoln's Gettysburg address; Dr. D. N. Kennedy sang a solo, and H. V. Speelman, commander-in-chief of the Sons of Veterans, read Lincoln's commander-in-chief of the Sons of Veterans. the misery incident to war and help it by the strength of peace. We stand ready if patriotism calls to sacrifice; we pray that we may remain free to serve."

"America" Is Sung.

The choir and assembly then joined in singing "America," after which benediction was pronounced by Rev. G. LeRoy White. The sounding of taps by a bugler brought the exercises to a close.
